Quarterly fund commentary

The Asia Pacific ex-Japan equity markets and Asian bond markets rose in Q1, with China, India and Hong Kong the region's only equity markets not delivering a positive return. ASEAN equity markets outperformed with Thailand, Malaysia and Indonesia all recording strong returns, with further monetary policy easing, improving economic data and stabilising oil prices all key drivers. Australia's equity market also made strong gains, benefiting from the performance of its materials and industrials sectors as commodity prices rebounded. Meanwhile, China's equity market declined on concerns over its economic slowdown and volatility in the renminbi. In terms of investment strategy, we have maintained a tilt towards Asian equities with high dividend yields, preferring what we consider to be quality companies in this area with steady growth in free cash flow. As such, we have significant exposure to Australia and Greater China, where we are able to find many attractive dividend-yielding stock opportunities. On the fixed income side, we continue to prefer Chinese issuers. In terms of currency management, we have maintained hedges on the Australian, New Zealand, Taiwanese and Thai currencies, with the aim of reducing excess volatility that might stem from unfavourable movements in our non-US dollar currency exposure.
