Quarterly fund commentary

Asia ex Japan equity markets ended the third quarter lower. The global macroeconomic backdrop remained challenging given the rising oil price, strengthening US dollar and escalating trade tensions. Even though the performance of consumer-related and communication services sectors lagged the broader market, domestic consumption in most Asian countries remained resilient. In China, domestic consumption has been robust, supported by healthy household income growth and accumulated wealth, and is now the biggest contributor to GDP growth. Other notable trends include consumption upgrading and stronger consumption growth in lower-tier cities. In India, real GDP growth has been on an upward trend. Private consumption, particularly in rural areas, has been a key pillar in supporting sustained expansion in economic activities. It is a similar story across the rest of Asia, where economic growth has been well supported by domestic consumption this year. We favour companies that are able to profit from the region's changing consumer dynamics, which has led to the fund having meaningful exposures to the consumer discretionary, staples and internet services sectors. We are particularly optimistic on the consumption growth story in China and India, where there are favourable structural trends such as the rising middle-class.

The performance period shown here starts on the last day of the first indicated month and ends on the last day of the last indicated month.
