Quarterly fund commentary

Asia Pacific ex-Japan equity markets declined 0.9% (total return, US$ terms) in the second quarter. The Greater China equity markets rose, while the rest of the region ended the quarter in negative territory. China's offshore and onshore equity markets benefited from further monetary easing (reduction of interest rates). From a sector perspective, infrastructure-related sectors across the region generally performed better, with the energy and industrials sectors outperforming the broader market. Asian governments remain committed to infrastructure development. For example, in India, the government continued to focus on road projects to improve the much-needed connectivity within the vast country, while Singapore's 2015 budget substantially increased the allocation of funds to infrastructure spending. In terms of investment strategy, we continued to focus on infrastructure-related sectors and held a sizable tilt toward the utilities, telecommunication services, and industrials sectors. Within these sectors, we find what we believe to be the most attractive companies, which also offered solid dividend yields, and are in the 'growth' (e.g. airports, roads, telecom services) or 'mature' (e.g. utilities, water treatment, hospitals) stages of their development life cycles. We continue to see significant opportunities in Asian infrastructure, particularly in China, India, Singapore and Indonesia.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. As a large portion of the fund is invested in less developed countries, you should be prepared to accept significantly large fluctuations of the value of the fund. As this fund is invested in a particular sector, you should be prepared to accept greater fluctuations of the value of the fund than for a fund with a broader investment mandate. The risks described herein are the fund specific material risks. For more information please consult the current fund and share class specific Key Investor Information Document (KIID) and for a complete set of risks the current prospectus. If you are unsure of any of these risks please contact your advisor.
