Quarterly fund commentary

Asia Pacific ex Japan equity and bond markets rose in Q3, with Asian equities outperforming bonds on the back of improved macroeconomic conditions and positive earnings surprises, as well as continued investor flows into emerging markets. Asian bonds benefited from expectations of further monetary policy easing in Asia. However, gains were limited as US Treasury yields gradually headed higher. In terms of equity market performance, Greater China led given the broad-based improvement in economic activity and better-than-expected quarterly earnings. The approval of the Shenzhen-Hong Kong Stock Connect trading link was also welcomed. Australia's equity market benefited from a rebound in commodity prices. In terms of equity sector performance, the IT and energy sectors led, while less economically sensitive sectors lagged, such as telecoms and healthcare. We maintained our tilt towards Asian equities with a high dividend yield. Within our equity investments, we have significant exposure to Australia and China, with our overall position in equities increasing in light of the improved earnings outlook. In fixed income, the majority of bonds held were US dollar-denominated Chinese issued bonds. In terms of currency management, we maintained our high level of exposure to US and HK dollars by implementing currency hedges on select Asian currencies.
