Quarterly fund commentary

Asia ex-Japan equity markets rose 0.7% (total return, US$ terms) in the second quarter. The Greater China equity markets (China, Hong Kong and Taiwan) were the only markets which gained over the period. The Chinese equity market was the best performer, as continued policy easing lifted hopes surrounding the outlook for economic growth. Meanwhile, growth deceleration driven by weakening demand for exports dampened the performance of ASEAN equity markets. From a sector perspective, consumer-related stocks had a mixed performance in the second quarter. The consumer staple sectors in Greater China and South Korea achieved a strong performance, while the consumer discretionary sector fell in all Asian markets. Within the consumer discretionary sector, there was notable weakness among automobile-related companies and stocks with exposure to Macau's casino gaming industry. Despite the mixed near-term outlook for consumer spending in Asia, we continued to believe that Asian consumer demand is a long-term secular trend that will drive growth in Asia. The fund maintains a diversified exposure across the consumer discretionary, consumer staples and healthcare sectors. In terms of stock selection, we favour investing in home-grown companies which have industry leadership, competitive business models and an emphasis on developing their own brands.
