Quarterly fund commentary

Most Asia ex Japan equity markets made good gains in Q3 supported by improved macroeconomic conditions and positive earnings surprises, as well as continued investor flows into emerging markets. Greater China equity markets led while ASEAN markets tended to lag. There were mixed returns across consumer sectors: consumer discretionary outperformed the broader market as did IT services companies; while the less economically sensitive consumer staples and healthcare sectors underperformed. Within the consumer discretionary sector, autos companies in India and China led, along with Chinese e-commerce companies, buoyed by a broad-based improvement in Chinese economic activity and government policy in India. In the healthcare sector, South Korean pharmaceutical companies faced short-term earnings headwinds, while in consumer staples, heightened concerns over muted top-line growth and companies' pricing ability weighed on sector returns. Looking ahead, we are optimistic that consumption in Asia will continue to support growth given favourable wage conditions and the low level of household debt. In India, consumers are also expected to enjoy rising incomes, which will be positive for consumer spending. The fund's primary focus is on consumer-related sectors in Asia, such as consumer discretionary/staples and healthcare, as we believe these sectors will continue to be sources of sustainable growth.
