Quarterly fund commentary

Asia ex Japan equity markets ended Q1 marginally higher with a notable pick-up in volatility. Strong economic data in the US triggered market fears over faster-than-expected interest rate hikes, while rising trade tensions have been dominating the headlines since March, leading to sharp market swings. Consumer-related sectors in general fared better given their earnings have greater exposure to domestic markets, while being less sensitive to the economic cycle. Economic momentum remained resilient in early 2018, while retail sales data across the region was also robust. Even though we expect the announced tariffs to have only a limited impact on growth, we believe regional governments will likely promote policies that support domestic consumption. Looking ahead, we believe consumer demand will continue to be a strong trend driving growth in Asia. We favour companies that are able to profit from the changing consumer dynamics in the region, which has led to meaningful exposure in the consumer discretionary, staples and internet services sectors. We are particularly optimistic on the consumption story in China and India, where we expect growth to be underpinned by favourable structural trends such as rising middle-class and robust income growth.
