Quarterly fund commentary

Asia ex Japan equities finished the fourth quarter lower. Mounting Sino-US trade tensions over the period negatively affected North Asian markets, particularly those that are most exposed to regional supply chains. On the other hand, India and some ASEAN markets benefited from declining oil prices and a flat dollar, two factors that helped deliver positive returns. In line with ongoing trends, domestic consumption remained resilient in most Asian economies and is likely to remain a positive driver going forward. In China, for example, private consumption as a share of GDP remains much lower than the current global average, suggesting long term potential upside. Rising household income and accumulated wealth will likely continue to propel China retail sales growth in the near- and medium-term. In India, rural consumption is set to enjoy a boost from a less severe monsoon season allowing the agricultural sector to post stronger gains. Meanwhile, the government's measures to support consumer spending ahead of upcoming general elections have proven positive for the consumer sector as a whole. We favour companies that have the potential to profit from changing consumer dynamics in the region, which has led to the fund having meaningful exposure to the consumer staples, discretionary and internet services sectors and are particularly optimistic about China and India's consumption growth story.

Each period starts at the end of the indicated month. The first indicated month may not represent a full month and may start only on the launch/restructuring date indicated in the headline.
