Quarterly fund commentary

Asia ex-Japan equity markets rose in Q4 with almost every market recording positive total returns, except India, Thailand and the Philippines. Fiscal packages and monetary policy easing to help stimulate domestic demand supported equity market performance, as did a general improvement in investor sentiment. The consumer discretionary sector outperformed the overall market due to strong performance of Macau gaming stocks, and Chinese auto companies which benefited from a reduction in the purchase tax for small vehicles. We continue to believe Asian consumer demand is a long-term secular growth theme, and underlying industry trends are expected to remain positive. As China continues to transition towards a consumption/services-driven economy and Indian consumers enjoy rising incomes, we believe current valuations are providing us with an attractive and unique opportunity to invest in these positive trends. As such, the fund has sizeable exposure to both these markets. The fund focuses on the consumer discretionary and consumer staples sectors, as we believe these two sectors will continue to exhibit steady growth. As for stock selection, we favour local home-grown companies with strong brands and a solid understanding of Asian consumer demand trends.
