Quarterly fund commentary

Asia Pacific ex Japan equity markets rose marginally in Q2. Most Asian markets achieved positive total returns on the back of favourable government policies and political developments. Asian infrastructure sector performance was mixed. The telecommunication services and utility sectors rose, while the industrials sector declined across multiple Asian markets. In addition, the rebound in global commodity prices benefited the energy and materials sectors. In our view, there is no change to the Asian economies' fundamentals amidst the latest global events. Infrastructure spending by Asian governments and corporates remains solid. China is continuing with the 'One Belt One Road' initiative, while India is estimated to spend US$100 billion per annum on infrastructure build-outs over the next few years. In terms of investment strategy, we continue to have a strong tilt toward infrastructure asset owners which tend to have better pricing power and are less dependent on nominal GDP growth. Such stock opportunities are more prevalent in telecoms, utilities and transportation service industries compared to commodity-heavy companies and construction industries. In terms of country positioning, we continue to have a tilt towards China, India and ASEAN countries on the back of favourable industry developments.
