Quarterly fund commentary

Since mid-July 2018, the Chinese authorities have been implementing a series of supportive monetary, fiscal and administration policies to boost economic growth so as to mitigate negative impacts from US-China trade war. In particular, the Chinese central bank has been injecting liquidity to the banking system, being constructive to Chinese corporate bonds. Hence, the Fund will continue to keep overweight in Chinese corporate bonds relative to the reference index. The Fund has also overweighted in Mongolia as this country benefits from increasing foreign direct investments from both China and the U.S. Fitch upgraded its sovereign credit rating in July 2018. Our interest rate hedging strategy has been reducing interest rate risk to the fund when the US Federal Reserve ('Fed') continued to hike interest rates and the inflationary pressures intensified. We endeavor to keep the fund's duration (sensitivity to interest rate) around 0.5 years for most of the time, compared to the Reference Index's duration of over 6 years. We will continue to keep the fund fully exposed to the US dollar, avoiding Asian currencies. As the Asian currencies may continue to weaken against the US dollar, the Fund will focus on the bond issuers which are not subject to big currency risk due to strong US dollar.

The performance period shown here starts on the last day of the first indicated month and ends on the last day of the last indicated month.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. Changes in interest rates will result in fluctuations in the value of the fund. The Fund may invest in a dynamic way across assets/asset classes, which may result in periodic changes in the risk profile, underperformance and/or higher transaction costs. As a large portion of the fund is invested in less developed countries, you should be prepared to accept significantly large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund may invest in contingent convertible bonds which may result in significant risk of capital loss based on certain trigger events. Investments in debt instruments which are of lower credit quality may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
