Quarterly fund commentary

Developed global equity markets kicked off the year with a strong start in Europe and Hong Kong, while other developed markets also enjoyed gains. Brightening economic outlooks across several regions and positive investor sentiment helped lift share prices. Government bond markets finished with modestly positive results, owing to a surge in prices mid-quarter. Continued risk appetite for equities coupled with the interest rate increase in the US and discussions of curtailing bond purchases in Europe (quantitative easing) diminished investor demand for perceived 'safe haven' assets such as government bonds. Within commodities, energy prices fell hardest as high inventories and rising US production reversed the advance made from recent global production cuts. Precious metals found renewed strength on signs of rising US inflation and fading US dollar strength, while industrial metals got a boost from better Chinese economic data and ongoing optimism regarding the potential for a US infrastructure programme. Moving forward, there are a few stumbling blocks. US equity investors are likely wondering whether the Republican Party can recapture that initial investor enthusiasm after they failed in their attempt to repeal the Affordable Care Act, while in Europe, a removal of the current accommodative monetary policy could have the potential to spook equity investors.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Whilst the overall risk of the fund intends to be consistent with that of a balanced portfolio of equity and debt securities, this may not be achieved. The fund will make significant use of financial derivatives for investment purposes in excess of the value of the portfolio that could lead to large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund uses derivatives to gain leverage which can potentially be up to three times the value of its net assets. The fund will gain exposure to commodities to diversify the risk of the fund. Commodities are generally considered to be high risk investments and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. The risks described herein are the fund specific material risks. For more information please consult the current fund and share class specific Key Investor Information Document (KIID) and for a complete set of risks the current prospectus.
