Quarterly fund commentary

Emerging market (EM) local currency bonds returned 2.11% for the quarter, as measured by the J.P. Morgan GBI-EM Global Diversified Index. The index yield ended the period at 6.46%. Returns in local currency terms were positive for the quarter while EM currencies depreciated versus USD and EUR. Broad commodities were lower for the period driven by metals and agriculture prices, while energy prices were higher. The dollar was slightly stronger against global currencies on a trade weighted basis and was up 2.06% versus a basket of EM currencies. Looking ahead we believe EM currencies could perform well if US growth moderates and converges with growth rates in the rest of the world. This should weaken the US dollar, and therefore be positive for unhedged EM currencies. If the US Fed moderates or pauses further interest rate increases in the US this too should weaken the dollar. Inflation expectations for EM may also come down as global growth and commodity prices have moderated. This should benefit EM local bond prices.

The performance period shown here starts on the last day of the first indicated month and ends on the last day of the last indicated month.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. Changes in interest rates will result in fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund uses derivatives (complex instruments) for investment purposes, which may result in the fund being significantly leveraged and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund may invest in distressed securities which carry a significant risk of capital loss. As a large portion of the fund is invested in less developed countries, you should be prepared to accept significantly large fluctuations in the value of the fund. Investments in debt instruments which are of lower credit quality may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
