Quarterly fund commentary

Emerging market local currency bonds fell during the quarter. Emerging market local currency bond yields rose 30 basis points to end the quarter at 7.09%. Returns were negative in local currency terms as emerging market currencies sold off versus the US dollar and Euro. China's economic slowdown and devaluation of the yuan pressured the global economy and markets in the third quarter. Trade slumped, commodity prices and emerging markets bonds and equities fell in value, the US dollar strengthened, while US treasuries rallied. Markets with higher sensitivities to commodity markets, dependence on trade with China, and weak balance sheets underperformed in the quarter. Sub Saharan commodity producers, oil exporters in Latin America were represented heavily in this category. Malaysia and Brazil, mired in a political scandal and economic weakness underperformed in the quarter. Sentiment toward emerging Europe was supported by European Central Bank quantitative easing, cyclical recovery in developed economies, relatively low dependence on China, and lower oil and commodity prices. We expect volatility levels to remain elevated into the fourth quarter as uncertainty around the timing of the US Federal Reserve's first hike in interest rates, health of the US economy; and slowdown in China's economic growth impedes confidence in risk assets.
