Quarterly fund commentary

Emerging market local currency bonds returned 0.82% for the quarter, as measured by the J.P. Morgan GBI-EM Global Diversified Index. The index yield ended the period at 6.14%. Returns in local currency terms were positive for the quarter while EMFX appreciated versus USD and EUR. Market technicals remain very strong and the rebound in commodity prices, on the back of ever easier global financial conditions, provides a solid backdrop for local market risks. Weak domestic demand and stronger currencies, support further monetary easing by many central banks. This is supportive of our long duration views. Strong global growth is negative for the US dollar as capital seeks riskier markets. Inflation risks in the US remain subdued, but we are closely monitoring wage growth, as a sign that the Federal Reserve may have to tighten monetary policy more than is currently priced. We have moderately increased our short US dollar position against higher carry currencies in the portfolio.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. The fund will invest in derivatives (complex instruments) which will result in the fund being leveraged and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund may invest in distressed securities which carry a significant risk of capital loss. As a large portion of the fund is invested in less developed countries, you should be prepared to accept significantly large fluctuations of the value of the fund. The fund will hold a large amount of debt instruments which are of lower credit quality and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
