Quarterly fund commentary

US politics took center stage in the fourth quarter of 2016. The new administration brings the prospect of a business-friendly environment; however, it is too early to tell whether campaign rhetoric translates into policy reality. OPEC formalized its intention to cut crude oil production, sending oil prices and energy equities higher. The fund underperformed its benchmark, the MSCI World Energy index, during the quarter. Security selection in oil & gas equipment & services had the largest negative impact on relative performance. Security selection and an underweight in integrated oil & gas and oil & gas refining & marketing detracted from relative performance. Performance was also hindered by ancillary cash. Conversely, an overweight in drilling, security selection in oil & gas exploration & production, as well as a lack of oil & gas storage & transportation and coal, were beneficial. We view OPEC's announcement to curtail production as a big strategy change not to be underestimated. It shows the lack of profitability globally in the energy sector. We still believe $70 per barrel is required to support reinvestment in the business. We continue to focus on fundamentals and have positioned the portfolio for a turnaround in the commodity. Fund positioning reflects our opinion of the sub-sectors with the best upside potential.
