Quarterly fund commentary

Global equity markets declined sharply in the fourth quarter amid ongoing trade tensions, falling oil prices, and fear of slowing economic growth in key global markets. Uncertainty about Brexit and disruption from the new Italian government's spending plans weighed on Eurozone markets, while US/China trade disputes threatened to weaken China's economy. The fund was down for the period but outperformed its reference index. Stock selection within the Financials, IT and Consumer Discretionary sectors contributed favourably to relative performance. In contrast, stock selection within Consumer Staples and an overweight position in the Energy sector dragged down relative returns versus the reference index. We took advantage of the market volatility over the quarter and put some cash to work at more attractive valuation levels. Although we did not buy any new names over the period, we did add to existing positions in some of our high conviction holdings. We did not completely sell out of any holdings over the period. Looking into 2019, our belief is that the narrow focus on particular investment types that have dominated the market in 2017 and early-2018 should end – as it has in previous cycles – and that investors will eventually focus more on fundamentals and valuations. In an environment, where US growth might be peaking, we believe our investment style could be moving back into favour.
