Quarterly fund commentary

The year began with corporate bond and equity markets in relatively buoyant mood following the US government's decision at the end of 2017 to implement tax reforms. Sentiment turned in February as stronger economic data raised expectations about the speed at which central banks might need to raise interest rates. During March, sentiment deteriorated further following the US government's decision to implement tariffs on select Chinese imports. Equities bore the brunt of the sell-off with corporate bond markets holding up reasonably well in comparison. Given the low level of yields the fund is defensively positioned with 32% allocated to cash and government bonds as at the 31 March 2018. Within corporate bond markets we think the best fixed income investment opportunities remain in bonds issued by some of Europe's leading banks. In addition, we are finding selective opportunities within non-financial high yield bonds. Through the equity allocation, we can benefit from an additional and potentially diversifying income stream and maintain an allocation of around 40% of portfolio assets. We currently favour selective companies in the financial and energy sectors.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. Debt instruments are exposed to credit risk which is the ability of the borrower to repay the interest and capital on the redemption date. Changes in interest rates will result in fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund will invest in derivatives (complex instruments) which will result in the fund being leveraged and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund. The fund may invest in distressed securities which carry a significant risk of capital loss. The fund's performance may be adversely affected by variations in the exchange rates between the base currency of the fund and the currencies in which the investments are made. The fund may invest in contingent convertible bonds which may result in significant risk of capital loss based on certain trigger events. The fund may hold a large amount of debt instruments which are of lower credit quality and may result in large fluctuations in the value of the fund.
