Quarterly fund commentary

Global corporate bonds delivered negative total returns in the fourth quarter despite finishing the year strongly. Politics dominated in a quarter that saw Donald Trump voted the next US President, concerns around a 'Hard Brexit' grew and an Italian constitutional referendum resulted in the government-supported constitutional reforms being widely rejected. Inflation expectations also rose primarily due to a stabilisation of oil prices and the base effect of higher prices feeding through to inflation calculations, whilst there was also an increasing sense within the market that monetary policy has reached the limits of its efficacy. This has led to rising speculation that fiscal policy will in future need to play more of a role in stimulating economic growth. Government bonds generally led corporate bonds lower, with corporate bonds outperforming on a relative basis. The fund follows a themes based approach, seeking out relative value opportunities across global corporate bond markets. The fund has a preference for subordinated financial bonds versus senior bonds. On a regional basis, we believe that Europe is currently the most attractive relative to the US and Asia. However, we have reduced our underweight to US based companies (versus the benchmark index) as valuations have become attractive in our view and the emergence of Trump could prove supportive.
