Quarterly fund commentary

Global stocks enjoyed one of the strongest starts to a year since 2012 amid optimism that the US administration's pro-growth policies are likely to boost corporate profitability, despite its protectionist rhetoric. However, investors' mood turned progressively cautious, more notably after the Republican's healthcare reform setback in March. This resulted in a reassessment of President Trump's ability to successfully push through key legislative reforms. Nonetheless, encouraging economic growth, improved consumer demand and strengthening manufacturing conditions globally saw global smaller company (small cap) equity markets for the most part deliver solid performances (total return, US dollar). Among developed markets, Continental Europe benefitted from an increasingly robust and broad-based economic upturn, whilst UK small cap equities also advanced higher. Japan was buoyed by better-than-expected corporate earnings and encouraging economic data. However, US small cap equities exhibited some softness but remained positive, as the post-US election stock market rally lost some of its steam over the quarter.
