Quarterly fund commentary

Riskier assets such as equities and corporate bonds continued to attract investors during the second quarter as market volatility remained surprisingly low despite continued uncertainty from geo-political events and the policy outlook. The US Federal Reserve lifted interest rates as expected in June but also indicated that it may begin to wind down its balance sheet sooner than expected, in a reversal of its quantitative easing. At the same time a number of leading central banks, including the European Central Bank, Bank of England and the Bank of Canada took a more hawkish stance, encouraged by stronger economic data. During the quarter, two new ideas were added to the fund, three were removed and there were significant changes to the implementation of five ideas. Our 'Equity - Dispersion' idea hopes to take advantage of the continued low correlation between S&P 500 constituents and the index itself and our 'Commodity - Short' idea uses total return swap indices to express a negative view against an index of energy and base metals. Closed ideas included our interest rates curve steepener ideas in both Japan and Europe. We also closed our 'Currency - Long Sterling' idea, which derived an income from selling options, this implementation looked less attractive after an appreciation in the UK pound and lower volatility.
