Quarterly fund commentary

The final quarter of the year capped a very strong year for global equity markets as a strong earnings season was complemented by generally positive economic data. In the US, President Trump enjoyed some success in getting his proposed tax reforms through congress and the US Federal Reserve raised interest rates, as expected, while upgrading its economic outlook for 2018. In the UK, November saw interest rates rise for the first time since 2007. Commodities enjoyed a strong end to the year with oil prices and copper prices doing particularly well. Credit markets outperformed government debt as major central banks have hinted at a turning tide for interest rates. During the quarter, the team added a new currency idea to the fund preferring the Japanese yen, which we believe is measurably cheap, to the Swiss franc. No ideas left the portfolio but other changes included removing Hungarian exposure from our emerging market debt idea, removing the US leg from our 'Interest Rates - Swap Spreads' idea and moving to a more directional implementation of our US dollar vs Canadian dollar idea following US dollar weakness. Finally, the option implementation of our Japanese equity idea was altered seeking to provide greater upside potential while limiting the downside for small market declines.
