Quarterly fund commentary

European equity markets generated positive total returns in Q2. The victory of pro-Europe centrist Emmanuel Macron in France's presidential election and the absolute majority his party was able to secure in the national assembly were well received by equity markets as they helped remove uncertainty about the outlook. Also helping European equities in Q2 were the strengthening signs of recovery in the economy. Eurozone unemployment dropped to 9.3%, the lowest level in more than eight years, and buoyant sentiment was registered among consumers and businesses. While eurozone inflation readings remained subdued, the continued expansion in growth indicators and a subtle change in guidance from the European Central Bank (ECB) revived the quantitative easing wind-down debate and sent government bond yields higher at the end of Q2. On the UK side, equity markets also rose in the second quarter as the Bank of England kept the interest rate at record low. Yet with inflation above 2%, UK policy makers are increasingly seeking to find the right balance between dealing with rising prices while keeping support for the economy. Our strategy remains focused on companies with what we view as attractive valuations, having the potential to pay and grow dividends, and deliver capital appreciation.
