Quarterly fund commentary

Equity markets rallied after the US presidential election as investors expected tax reform, infrastructure spending and regulatory changes to stimulate economic activity. The market was led by financials, while defensives like consumer staples, real estate and healthcare, posted negative returns. Though we are cognizant of the macroeconomic environment, the economic cycle is distinct from the bottom-up profit cycle, so we do not apply macroeconomic forecasts to our stock selection. The fund outperformed the benchmark S&P 500 index during the quarter. Fund holdings in financials contributed the most to overall performance. An underweight position in healthcare helped the fund outperform as the sector declined during the quarter. Stock selection in information technology and energy also helped versus the S&P 500 whilst holdings in consumer staples, healthcare and real estate detracted. The fund's overweight position in consumer staples hurt relative results as did stock selection in industrials. At quarter-end, the fund's largest overweights were in consumer staples and utilities. Primary underweights were in technology and healthcare. We focus on three key elements over a full market cycle - appreciation, income and preservation. We are still finding attractive investments, but the opportunity set is narrower at this point in the cycle. As such, we remain focused on the risk-reward profile of the fund's investments.
