Quarterly fund commentary

The fourth quarter of 2018 was a particularly difficult for US High Yield bonds. The Bloomberg Barclays US Corporate High Yield 2% Issuer Capped index fell 4.5% as high yield credit spreads widened over 200 basis points (bps). Global growth fears spawned by trade tensions and tightening financial conditions hurt risk assets. Equities sold off sharply with high yield following suit. Lower quality credit underperformed with CCC-rated issuers falling 9.3% and BB-rated issuers outperformed by dropping only 2.9%. The energy sector was particularly hard hit as oil prices fell almost 40% during the period. The strategy performed in line with its benchmark during the quarter. The Fund benefitted from security selection in the retail, independent energy and consumer cyclical sectors; while positioning in the metals & mining, automotive and the midstream sectors were detractors. The underweight to the distressed sector was a positive contributor while the underweight to BB-rated issuers was a detractor. Wider credit spreads to start the new year has provided a favorable foundation for future returns. With company fundamentals solid and defaults low, returns in 2019 could approach mid-to-high single digits. New issue supply is expected to remain constrained providing technical support to the market. The main risk for the market continues to be slowing global growth.
