Quarterly fund commentary

China's equity market fell in Q4 as tighter property market policies and increasing concerns over possible protectionist policies in the US overshadowed positive economic developments in China. Despite the pullback in equity markets, economic activity remained relatively solid in China, with retail sales and production continuing to show strength. The government's efforts to cool down the property market weighed on property developers with the real estate sector leading the market lower. The information technology sector also faced selling pressure due to some profit taking activities and earnings falling short of consensus targets for some major companies. Sectors that managed to gain over the past quarter were the energy and materials sector as commodity prices kept heading higher, while the increase in government infrastructure spending was positive for materials companies. Our fund's investment strategy is to achieve long-term capital growth by investing in quality sustainable growth companies with exposure to mainland China using a bottom-up stock selection approach. As China continues to transition to a more consumer demand-driven economy, our preference is for companies in the consumer focused areas such as internet, autos, education, apparel, retailers and food & beverages industries.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. As a large portion of the fund is invested in less developed countries, you should be prepared to accept significantly large fluctuations of the value of the fund. As this fund is invested in a particular geographical region, you should be prepared to accept greater fluctuations of the value of the fund than for a fund with a broader investment mandate. The risks described herein are the fund specific material risks. For more information please consult the current fund and share class specific Key Investor Information Document (KIID) and for a complete set of risks the current prospectus.
