Quarterly fund commentary

European high yield bond markets delivered a positive return over the final quarter of 2017. This came despite an abrupt sell-off within the high yield market during early November. However, the market's ongoing demand for income and the still strong fundamental position of much of the corporate sector meant losses were quickly recovered. Amid further signs of the health of economic activity in the Eurozone, European equity markets were broadly flat. The basic materials sector was among the best performers benefiting from an improvement in copper prices. On the other hand, the telecommunications and healthcare sectors were among the leading detractors. Overall positioning remains defensive, with high levels of liquidity (cash, government bonds and short dated securities). The fund's allocation to non-financial high yield bonds is focused on high quality companies we consider carry a lower risk of default. We continue to believe the best investment opportunities lie in the financial sector. We also like junior bonds across the insurance, utility and telecom sectors. Through the fund's equity allocation, we are able to benefit from an additional and potentially diversifying income stream, along with potential capital appreciation. We maintain an allocation of around 20% of the portfolio's assets in equities.
