Quarterly fund commentary

Japanese equity markets rallied over the final quarter of the year. This rally was driven by better-than-expected earnings results, solid global growth and Prime Minister Shinzo Abe's landslide victory in the snap election. This victory could lead to more business friendly structural reforms, in our view. Against this market backdrop, a new position was introduced in a motor engine manufacturer partly due to our belief that this company has the potential to increase dividends. In turn, an entire position in a leading recipe website company was sold due to concerns surrounding capital expenditure requirements going forward which we believe may limit future dividend increases. Looking ahead, we may see some volatility in markets in the near-term post their strong performance over last 12 months. Nonetheless, we believe the outlook for the equity market is positive as, in our view, Japan's corporate fundamentals and improving economy are not reflected in companies' market valuations. Furthermore, most investors appear to have overlooked the ongoing progress in corporate governance reform. Using a bottom-up investment process, we select companies which have the ability to increase their dividends over the long-term. The fund is well-diversified, including companies that are already paying an attractive dividend yield and those that have the potential to increase their dividends going forward.
