Quarterly fund commentary

Global equity markets delivered positive returns in the fourth quarter, supported by firmer global economic growth and stronger corporate fundamentals. Oil prices reached a two-year high during the quarter, buoyed by lower US stockpiles and OPEC agreement to extend production cuts to the end of 2018. The fund underperformed its benchmark, as stock selection in the oil & gas exploration & production subindustry was a key detractor. A combination of selection and market allocation in oil & gas equipment & services and refining & marketing also detracted. Areas of relative contribution included a lack of holdings in oil & gas storage & transportation and coal industries, as well as out-of-benchmark exposure to the diversified metals & mining industry. An overweight in oil & gas drilling and security selection in integrated oil & gas also helped relative returns. We believe the current oil price is unsustainable. The industry requires a much higher commodity price level in order to encourage reinvestment in the business. We continue to focus on fundamentals and have positioned the portfolio for a turnaround. Fund positioning reflects our opinion of the sub-sectors we believe to have the best upside potential and includes significant overweight in exploration & production as well as significant underweight in integrated oil companies.

Risk Warnings

The value of investments and any income will fluctuate (this may partly be the result of exchange rate fluctuations) and investors may not get back the full amount invested. As this fund is invested in a particular sector, you should be prepared to accept greater fluctuations of the value of the fund than for a fund with a broader investment mandate.
