Quarterly fund commentary

The US equity market posted fresh all-time highs in the last quarter. The month of December rounded off the best year for the US equity market since 2013. When dividends are included, the US equity market has posted positive returns every calendar month of 2017 - the first such streak in history. During December, the US Fed increased interest rates, as was widely anticipated, and raised its outlook for economic growth in 2018. While US third quarter economic growth was revised down to an annual rate of 3.2%, the pace of growth remains the fastest since early 2015. Markets will now turn attention to 2018 for clues on whether corporations will plough some of the savings into investments that will bolster earnings at the same time central banks around the world are reducing stimulus or raising interest rates. The current view for US equity markets remains moderately positive, mainly driven by a positive trend and a low risk aversion. As a result, with a current weight of almost 90% the fund remains overweight in equities when compared to the benchmark. The fund focuses on stocks with attractive risk-return profiles as identified by a systematic investment process which is based on four factors: Earnings Momentum, Price Momentum, Quality and Value.
