Quarterly fund commentary

Japan's equity market rose thanks to strong quarterly earnings, solid global economic growth and the victory of the ruling coalition in the snap election. This win gave the Liberal Democratic Party a fresh mandate to continue its expansionary economic policies. Japan's economic data showed further improvement with 3Q GDP growing by 2.5%, while inflation stayed below the Bank of Japan's 2.0% target but did continue to rise. Against this backdrop, the central bank maintained its expansionary monetary policy. Finally, the Bank of Japan Tankan Survey (December) showed the large manufacturers' business confidence index achieving its highest level since December 2006. This provides further evidence that the economy is gathering momentum from exports and solid corporate profits. The fund is biased towards more economically sensitive areas of the market as well as some exposure to more domestically driven sectors, with significant positions in automakers, banks, real estate and oil companies. We are finding the most attractive valuations in areas of the market which are sensitive to global growth, while in the more growth oriented areas, we believe valuations in some cases look stretched. We added new holdings in shipping companies, an electric power company and a brokerage business over the quarter.
